THE PHILP CASE.

YESTERDAY'S EVIDENCE ADDUCED FROM RELIABLE SOURCES.

HON. ABRAM S. HEWITT SAYS GARFIELD WROTE THE LETTER.

PHILIP DENIES UNDER OATH THAT HE WROTE THE DOCUMENT.

THE CONCLUSION EVIDENT THAT GARFIELD IS IN FAVOR OF COOLIE LABOR.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—The proceedings in the Philp case to-day fully bore out the objects of the defense, establishing: First, the existence of Morey as the agent of the Employees' Union and the correspondent of Garfield's handwriting in the letter of every movement of Morey's life, and every incident relating to the history, occasion and motive of the letter will be fully shown hereafter. Much of this is already plain by the proceedings in court, and more by the published evidence not yet put in before Judge Davis. There are other witnesses on the way from distant points, Florida and elsewhere, who will make the facts of Garfield's conviction as plain as the incidents of the convention which nominated Garfield for president. The effort of the prosecution to delay the case may postpone some items of proof but they cannot obscure the proven facts: that PHILP DID NOT WRITE THE LETTER, did not know anything about it; that Morey was in official correspondence with Garfield; that Jewell, chairman of the republican national committee, after having been acquainted with the proofs, and probably having informed Garfield of them, offered to prostitute himself and his candidate, whose agent he was, by bartering a high office for the suppression of their proofs, and that there is not a shred of evidence to support the charge of forgery, which the republicans did not dare to make formally, but insinuated only under the cover of criminal libel.

The prosecution of Philp has made a point as to the misplaced dot in the signature over the "r" instead of over the "p" in "Garfield." There is at hand a hotel register with his signature with the same peculiarity which was accidentally discovered yesterday. Even as the case now stands, with only a part of the proof in evidence were the claims of the letter as a provisory note or deed no jury would fail to find that Garfield was the maker of it. The attempted prosecution of Philp has turned out to be the conviction of Garfield.

The following is the testimony of Morey and of Hon. A. S. Hewitt: The first witness was SAMUEL E. MOREY, who gave his testimony with great stress and incisiveness. He said he lived in Lawrence, Mass., having been born in Lowell; was a common laborer until he enlisted in the army in 1861, where he remained until August, 1865. Mr. Morey produced his discharge and said he also had his pensions with him; he received a pension up the time he went to South America for his health. When Mr. Howe asked him, "Did you know H. L. Morey ever?" the witness replied sharply, "I did, sir, he was an uncle of mine, who formerly lived in Andover, N. H. He went from there to Fisherville, N. H., and opened a grocery store, he next went for a commercial house in Boston, from there to Pennsylvania were he traveled for a house." The witness then went to South America and lost track of him for three years. "On my return I saw him first in Lynn, in the fall of 1877 and in the spring of 1878. I also saw him on the main street and went from there to Boston with him. About the 1st of March of last year I went to Lynn to get some papers signed, regarding my pensions; after I had got all the papers ready to go home again, going to the depot I met H. L. Morey on the street and he says to me, 'Sam—'

Here Mr. Morey was promptly interrupted by Col. Bliss's objection and continuing said that he went to the city hall with H. L. Morey to view the remains of a mutilated corpse that was found there, called the "Trunk mystery," and they saw the body there.

"Have you seen H. L. Morey?" was asked of the witness. "I have frequently" said the witness. "He writes a VERY COARSE HAND WRITING and I presume I could know it if I saw it."

Here the register of the Courtland house, of Lynn, Mass., was produced, and the signature of "H. L. Morey Lowell," in a large bold hand writing under date of Feb. 5, 1879 was shown to Mr. Morey who said at once: "I should say to the best of my ability that that is his hand writing." On the page under the date of Friday, Oct. 17, 1877 the name of H. L. Morey, Lynn, appears and here again the witness said it was H. L. Morey's hand writing. Continuing he said that he had visited now and then in Lynn seeing his mother and brother, when the counsel asked if he ever heard from his uncle, H. L. Morey, whether he was connected with labor movements.

Col. Bliss leaped to his feet with a quick objection but the court allowed the answer. And the witness said: "All I know with regard to this being acquainted with the labor movement is, he showed me a certificate of membership." Here came another sharp objection on the ground that the paper must be produced or its loss shown. Mr. Howe withdrew the question for a moment to ask where it was that the witness, uncle produced this document, which the witness said was at Lawrence, Mass., in, or about June, 1879, he saw the paper, had it in his hand and handed it back to his uncle, the court finally excluded the evidence.

The cross examination was then undertaken by Col. Bliss, who brought the additional facts, that the witness had been in Lynn three or four times a year, and at times stopped over night at his step-mother's, Clara S. Morey.

Col. Bliss tried to entrap the witness as to what relation she was to H. L. Morey, but the witness replied, she was my father's second wife and H. L. Morey was my father's brother. Clara S. Morey was still alive and when the witness was last in Lynn lived on Boston street. The witness having said that the place where he met H. L. Morey was on Main street, corner of Washington avenue, Col. Bliss said in thunder tones: "Don't you know that there is not a Lynn, Mass., any street known as Main street?"

"No, sir," said the witness, in equally decided tone.

"THERE IS A MAIN STREET

in Lynn, Mass."

"Well," said Col. Bliss, before the court could stop him, "I'll satisfy you and everybody else of that."

The remark was indignantly objected to by Mr. Brooks, and the court promptly struck the offensive remark out.

The witness then described that what was called Main street, in Lynn, ran from the city hall near down to the wharves. "The last time that I saw H. L. Morey was at my brother's house in Lawrence in June, 1878; my brother's name is Francis A. W. Morey."

Col. Bliss asked how he came to be present in court, and Mr. Morey said that the man who came after him got a telegram from the democratic headquarters to come here. That was on Saturday. The man that came in was Mr. S. P. Clark, of Lawrence, who told him his expenses would be paid. He got here Saturday night at about eleven o'clock, and went at once to the democratic national committee rooms. "Has any statement of yours been published," was asked.

"Yes," was the reply, "a reporter of the Lawrence Eagle came to me, but what I said was not published correctly."

Col. Bliss asked him if he had been offered any money to come to New York, and the witness said he was told that his expenses would be paid.

Mr. Brooke, in the indirect examination, took up this point and asked him if he had been offered any money not to come.

"Yes," said Morey. "I have been offered $100 not to come here."

[Laughter.] When the name of Hon. Abram S. Hewitt was called by Mr. Howe, a sensational murmur ran through the audience, and the excitement to hear what he had to say became very manifest.

MR. HEWITT, after stating his membership of the 44th and 45th congress, and his acquaintance with General Garfield and his familiarity with his handwriting, produced two letters written to him by General Garfield, and said he had frequently seen Garfield's signature. The celebrated Morey letter was then handed to him, which he said he had looked at carefully.

"In whose handwriting is the signature?" asked Mr. Howe.

"I think it is General Garfield's handwriting," was the prompt reply.

"Have you any doubt about it?"

"No other doubt about it," was the answer, "than would arise from the fact that clever counterfeiters can imitate any man's handwriting."

Mr. Hewitt then took the Morey letter in one hand and in the other the three letters he had received from General Garfield. Also the Jewell letter and one written to Warren O'Neil, and was about to answer to the identity of the handwriting in each, when he was sharply interrupted as not being an expert. Mr. Hewitt then said that he had had considerable experience in his large business experiences in comparing handwriting and signatures on checks and drafts, and that while he did not call himself a proficient expert, still he was familiar with the use of the microscope in the examination of signatures and handwriting; had often used it, and had done so in this case to satisfy his own mind. Upon this statement Judge Davis said he would allow Mr. Hewitt to answer and the question was put:

"I now ask you the question whether, in your opinion, from comparison of the letter and signatures produced, the Morey letter is in the handwriting of General Garfield?"

Mr. Hewitt held up the Morey letter in one hand and the others spread out the other and answered deliberately and firmly,

"I THINK IT IS."

The O'Neil letter was then handed to him and a similar question was put.

"I should have more doubt," said Mr. Hewitt, "about that signature than about the Morey letter, though, unless some circumstances were suggested to make it suspicious, I should suppose it to be General Garfield's signature, would excite great doubt in my mind."

The Morey letter was again placed in his hands and his attention called to the misspelled word "company," and he was asked:

"Do you know any instances whether you can cite of incorrect spelling on the part of General Garfield?"

"In one of the letters which I have produced to the court," said Mr. Hewitt, "and which has been put in evidence, the letter of May 12th, 1879, addressed to me, it is signed by General Garfield and has a sign in his handwriting. In that postscript the word 'pedigree' is spelled 'pedidree.' (Sensation in court.)"

On cross-examination, Mr. Stoughton asked:

"Do you think that was intended as a 'g' or a 'd'?"

"As a 'd,' sir."

"Do you think that he made a mistake in spelling?"

Mr. Hewitt: "I suppose in his hasty writing he wrote 'd' instead of 'g'."

Continuing his testimony, Mr. Hewitt said he first saw the Morey publication on Wednesday, the 20th, the day of its publication, at about noon, at the room of the national democratic committee, of which he was a member. He was about to make a speech at Chickering hall, and the published letter was handed to him at 2 o'clock. He saw the original letter itself and the envelope, and looked at the superscription and the postmark on the letter, however, a cursory glance at the envelope. He only looked then at the envelope. There were six or eight gentlemen about the table, among them Mr. Barnum, Mr. Scott, Mr. Randall and a gentleman who was introduced as Mr. Hart, who seemed to have control of it, and whom they did not know until they told him, and had not seen before.

He noticed the address on the envelope and compared it with the address inside, and remarked that they were in the handwriting. He was asked about the alleged erasures of the date in the circle of that stamp, and replied that he observed indications of its being blurred, or rubbed in some way, but not so to erase the date.

THE DATE WAS NOT ERASED. It has a blurred appearance and may have been done by rubbing in the mail.

Philp then took the stand and testified briefly and forcibly that he did not write the letter or know of its existence until after its publication in the Truth.

"IS MOREY A MYTH?" SATISFACTORILY ANSWERED.

Affidavit of Person Who Saw The Original Chinese Letter in February.

Special Telegram to THE SENTINEL.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—The news received this morning at National Democratic headquarters increases the confidence of the committee in the results of to-morrow's election. Reports have been received from every doubtful State, showing universal enthusiasm and a strong and confident final pull for victory. The Chinese labor letter case is going on to-day, and the case for the defense will be FULLY ESTABLISHED unless the testimony now at hand is ruled out. The nephew of Henry L. Morey has just testified, proving clearly the circumstances and motive of sending to the Truth the letter received by his uncle from Garfield. The following dispatch was received at National Democratic headquarters at 11 o'clock this morning:

CUMBERLAND, Md., Oct. 31, 1880.

To Hon. Wm. H. Barnum, chairman:

The following affidavit of Robert Lindsay is authentic:

Robert Lindsay, being duly sworn, says that he resides in Allegheny, Maryland; that he is personally acquainted with Henry L. Morey, whom he first met in 1874 and since at Lowell and Lynn, in the State of Massachusetts, also in Boston and in Philadelphia; that said Morey has frequently spoken to dependent upon the subject of cheap labor and that in Boston on or about the 4th day of February, 1880, said Morey showed to dependent several letters from prominent individuals relating to the subject of cheap labor; that one of said letters was from Hon. James A. Garfield and dependent further swears that one of the letters then and there shown him by said Henry L. Morey was the identical so-called Chinese letter which is now a matter of public controversy, or at least, the words were the same as expressed in said letter, and that he recognized the engraving and photograph of the said letter as being the photograph of the letter shown him by Morey on the said 4th day of February; that said Morey expressed a determination to go from Boston to New Orleans and dependent says he has not seen him since.

The United Labor League Declares Against the Republican Candidate.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—The United Labor League of America has issued an address to the workmen of the United States in which Garfield is handled quite roughly. It is shown that he is an honorary member of the Cobden Club, the largest free trade organization in the world, and he is summed up as follows:

He is the man who reduced your wages; he is the man who burst up your factories; he is the man who caused the enforced idleness of millions of American machinists; he is the man who destroyed millions of your currency; he is the man who voted for the salary grab; he is the man who voted against the eight-hour law; he is the man who voted millions to Boss Shepherd out of your National Treasury.

He is the man who refused to vote for an appropriation to pay the robbed and down-trodden laborers of the District of Columbia.

He is the man that voted millions of acres of your lands to railroad kings of America.

He is the man who has been foremost in everything in Congress which was labeled "job."

He is the man who debauched legislation, ruined and made a wilderness out of your manufacturing districts.

He is a man who, as chairman of the committee on appropriations, brought back the bill known as the salary grab, and plundered your Treasury of millions.

He is the man who voted against the right of actual settlers on public lands.

He is the man that got a $5,000 bribe to open the door of your Treasury to Boss Shepherd and all the jail birds of America.

He is the man who turned promissary good into positive evil, prostituted the pulpit of Christ, and borrowed the lives of Heaven in which he served the devil.

He is the man who voted to tax tea, coffee and printing paper, articles which all workmen must use.

He is the man who sold himself to England, and if you are guilty of the inexcusable crime of electing him president, you will be governed through the free traders of London instead of through Washington.

He is the man whom the English free traders sent over to this country £1,000,000 to buy up votes in Indiana to elect him President in November.

He is the man whose public life has been a contradiction to labor and honesty.

Several hundred warrants were sworn out by the officers, and between two and three hundred arrests have been made.

ELECTION RETURNS.

THE SENTINEL to-day contains the very latest news concerning the great political battle, now almost over, and will, from day to day as long as the excitement lasts, contain full and accurate returns received at the latest hour of going to press. In many parts of the country disturbances have occurred and will recur, and THE SENTINEL aims to be ahead of all competitors in furnishing all the news, and the truth about it.

DEMOCRATS are composed of good material and do not become demoralized very easily. Remember this if the result is against us.

It has been evidenced to-day that a death struggle is being fought by one of the two great parties, and the crowning victory of either one will be a victory dearly bought.

It pains THE SENTINEL severely that a number of excellent communications on various political subjects, were crowded out of yesterday's issue. To-day, alas, is too late for such reading.

CHARLES FOSTER, of Ohio, looks as smiling and happy as if Garfield's senatorial chair had been fitted for him, says an exchange. 'T would be too bad to disappointed the calico favorite.

DEATHS must be expensive affairs in the land where dwell the Whydohs, on the west coast of Africa. The governor has just died, and the obituary exercises are to last for four months, and two hundred captured chiefs will be beheaded.

LET not the public imagine that it costs little or no money to run a daily newspaper. THE SENTINEL's special dispatches of the past two publication days viz., Saturday and Monday, cost $113.52, and every word came over the lines of the Western Union company.

POLITICIANS, a word personal. To-night, when the returns come in, if you cannot agree with your neighbor on the estimates put forth, don't get mad and ugly just because of that. The time during the next twenty-four hours will be fraught with many disagreements, but it is just as easy and much better to keep cool and be personally polite and respectful toward an adversary, be he political or social. Remember you are Indiana.

DESPITE the strong protest of the moderate section of that eminently inconsistent city, Paris, the municipality has commenced discussion of a scheme for substituting elected in the place of appointed mayors of twenty cities, thus rendering the municipality almost independent of the government. That there should be any opposition to such a scheme, is a query, but it has come to be generally understood that France wants to be a republic only in name.

If the election now progressing results in a defeat to General Hancock this country will have degenerated to the lowest depths of political infamy. If for no other cause, the republicans have earned defeat by their actions in New York last night. The party managers did a large business in bogus news, sending over fifty dispatches to doubtful points announcing such preposterous falsehoods as the intended withdrawal of General Hancock. There was a plentiful crop of such lies for fools to swallow. Another infamy is the report that Hancock is removed from military command; another that he is dead. Despite these he will live to be inaugurated President of the United States on

GENTLEMAN, EVERY ONE.

It is pleasant to note amid the animosities engendered by this campaign, the harmony existing between the democratic and republican organizations of this city. It has been demonstrated that blood is thicker than water, and that brotherly love far outshines any jealousies that a political campaign may have caused. The funeral of Herman Rehnen, yesterday afternoon was a piece of genuine sorry rarely witnessed and never equalled. The deceased was captain of the Hancock and English guards, but was as well known among the members of the Garfield legion, who attended the funeral in a body, as in his own party ranks. And he it said to the credit of those composing the followers of General Garfield, may it redound to their credit as gentlemen and as politicians, that they occupied a position in the procession which no discrimination selected, which no motives but esteem and love for a departed friend made valuable, and which they filled with a gentlemanly deportment characteristic of such an occasion. General Garfield may be proud of such followers, Fort Wayne of such citizens.

THE CHINESE LETTER.

In estimating the full force the revelations as to the Chinese letter have had in relation to the political situation it must be remembered that the letter was so evidently a forgery that no honest democrat pronounced it genuine; that no such man as Morey lived in Lynn, was connected with the Employers' Union, or was in correspondence with General Garfield, and that the sentiments of the letter were "stupid and brutal." The republicans also proclaimed throughout the country that Philip had been convicted of forgery on October 27. With the exception of the stupidity and brutality of the letter, to the contrary was shown as to all the republican claims, although they have contrived to delay the adjudication until after election. It is perfectly plain that no one except Garfield can be convicted of writing the letter which is in full accord of himself and his party in congress on the subject of Coolie competition with American labor. The record of the democratic party on this subject was made up not by the accidents of this case and of disclosures which led to them but by the proceedings of congress and by the platform adopted at Cincinnati. The course of Garfield and Jewell in this affair is only characteristic of the party which by tricks and frauds defeated the installation of the president and vice president in 1876.

HERMAN REHNEN.

BY J. E. B.

Across the harp of thousand strings Hath swept a thrilling strain, Sad tidings, wounding many a heart With sharp, regretful pain; Revealing dew his stern mission here And his relentless sway, Which bound the teller none may break Round him we mourn to-day.

And darkly over us the pall Of sudden gloom hath spread, A light hath vanished from our eyes Whose guiding radiance led Our stumbling feet securely on The rugged path of life, With heavenly graces quelling Its painful fever strife.

And yet it is but selfish grief That bids us mourn for thee, For well we know our loss thy gain For evermore must be.

O grave, thou hast no victory here! And death, thou hast no sting! For captive, like a captivity Hadst led, who soon will bring All his true children to their home To meet the perfect just, When loosened is the silver cord And dust returns to dust.

IN MEMORY

Of the Late Herman Rehnen. The following resolutions of respect have been adopted by the members of the Hancock and English boys. They were unavoidably crowded out of yesterday's issue:

WHEREAS, It has pleased Almighty God to take from our midst Herman Rehnen, our friend and captain of Company A; therefore be it

Resolved, That the Hancock and English First Voters extend their sympathy and condolence with the family of our friend and brother member, and be it further

Resolved, That the Hancock and English First Voters attend his obsequies in a body and in full uniform, as a testimonial of our friendship for him.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be presented to the bereaved family, and the secretary be ordered to spread them upon the minutes, and that a copy be presented to the press of the city for publication.

Oct. 30th, 1880.

JOS. C. WILLIARD, Adjutant.

And members of the Hancock and English First Voters.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be presented to the family of the bereaved; also, to the Hancock and English club, of which he was a member.
